Yes, there is good news

The peace and environmental movements are galvanized and stronger than ever.
Many regular people who were never politically active got involved in the get-out-and-vote efforts that produced record turnout, offering true hope for the future of democracy.

President Vladimir Putin signed the bill Nov. 5 confirming Russia’s ratification of the Kyoto Protocol, clearing the way for the global climate pact to come into force next year. Both houses of parliament last month ratified the protocol, which aims to stem global warming by reducing greenhouse-gas emissions.

Union of Concerned Scientists: Good news from Colorado. In the first-ever opportunity for citizens to vote on renewable energy standards, UCS and a coalition of groups in the state secured a victory that requires utilities to provide 10 percent of their electricity from wind, solar and other clean energy sources by 2015. Much like the historic climate change regulations that were passed in California, this success will be an effective tool for leveraging clean energy and clean air initiatives in other states and at the federal level.

The National Museum of the American Indian opened on the National Mall between the Smithsonian’s Air and Space Museum and U.S. Capitol, Sep. 21. According to the Washington Spectator, Oct 15, 2004, “Richard West, the NMAI director, has said that ‘native peoples want to remove themselves from the category of cultural relics, and instead, be seen and interpreted as peoples and cultures with a deep past that are very much alive today. They want the opportunity to speak directly to our audiences through our public programs, presentations and exhibits-to articulate in their own voices and through their own eyes the meaning of the objects in our collections and their import in native art, culture and history.’”

The Conservation Law Foundation (CLF) has won a major victory with national implications for enforcing the Clean Water Act. The Vermont Water Resources Board ruled that all existing storm-water dischargers in five watersheds around Burlington, Vermont must stop polluting their local rivers and streams. These waters run into Lake Champlain and are the principal cause of the devastating pollution that resulted in massive algae blooms on the lake this summer.

Now, owners of all large stores and parking lots in these five watersheds whose storm-water runs into already polluted streams must obtain permits under the Federal Clean Water Act. The twist is that the polluters will not be able to obtain the now-mandatory permits unless they clean pollution from their storm-water runoff. This decision has immense ramifications because the Clean Water Act applies to all U.S. waters.

Mike Miles, who came to the Andover area with the Wheels of Justice Tour Bus late last spring, is delighted that he did so well as a Green Party candidate for the 7th District Seat of the House of Representatives in Wisconsin, ending “with 26,188 votes, which was 9% of total votes cast. Not bad for a campaign that didn’t sponsor a single fundraising event and had no paid staff.” Nationally, he was the top Green Party vote getter.

Writers in MVPP

The day after the election, MVPP members felt the need to be together, to embrace and mourn. Fourteen came to the Andover Wednesday vigil with candles and the following poems. Becci’s prose is encouraging.
For the least of these

So, fear has spoken again corrupting common sense of right and wrong, projecting onto others the evil in ourselves.

Afraid of terror, will we now get what we wish for?

So, gluttons trump hunger again muting shared longings for justice with peace, laying waste to gifts received and more to be bequeathed.

Afraid of our starvation, will we now choke on the riches we hoard?

Or shall we leaven our souls, rise and resist, for the sake of the other’s child?

Again with the Herons

What do I know of them, really?
So little More than before the year began though
I could pick one out in a line-up with snowy egrets and little blues now

When I came back here today I had no expectations Figuring they’d probably up and migrated with New England winter coming on
But thanks to dear Annie needing a dog-sitter,
We were back adventuring in Lawrence’s one wilderness area

I heard kingfishers – at least one anyhow Saw what may be the pair of peregrine falcons that live in the city’s clock tower
- One of them soaring almost as high as the clouds -
And I was pursuing some white-headed waterfowl to better identify it when TIMBER!!!! down came dead wood, up flew beloved birds

It was Annie who brought me to them in the first place
When she needed care this summer
And Annie who got me out in the woods again
On one of the clearest, brightest, most pleasant of November days

From my time with her I learned how hard it is to see the great blues
When they are sitting near logs by the water
Their slate blue tint almost gray and practically impossible to discern
From the shades of the trees in that swampy pond

Today’s magic moment was a gift
That we should be there when the tree fell felt providential
Seeing the herons take to flight stole my breath away
And all the bad politics and policies in the world lost their greatness
On this day after the election
I elected to walk in a peaceful place and was rewarded for my effort

Thank you wild and majestic birds
For being you, yes
But for reminding me of my own wildness, too
And of the majestic planet earth that we love and will continue to fight for

Musings of an Activist

By the time of publication, I hope that an investigation has been launched into all the 2004 election irregularities. It would be only fit-ing in a year when I, like so many, participated more directly in the election process than ever before. I knocked on hundreds of doors in southern New Hampshire, made countless phone calls and did data entry. I monitored Ward 2 in Dover, NH from 8 am to 7 pm on November 2. Based on the results and my observations before, during and after the 2004 election, I refuse to feel defeated.

New Hampshire allows same-day voter registration. In just the ward I observed (Dover abuts Durham, the home of the University of New Hampshire), at least 450 students registered on election day! Many students had pre-registered. The turnout set an all-time record. It was astounding! The Moderator ran a very professional polling place, allowed all qualified voters (the students appeared with exactly what was needed to register) to vote and the totals were not suspicious.

If the election stands, I am very hopeful that the mid-year elections will be a backlash against the realities of this administration's agenda. Certainly, the election in four years will yield change, because of what the Bush policies produce. There will be no rapture, there will be continuing horrific loss of life in Iraq (and elsewhere?), there will be more ominous signs of global climate change, the tax burden will be sorely felt by the working and middle classes, and the blame will be placed squarely on the administration that has been the source of the problems. Sometimes the uninformed and misguided need to be swiftly kicked before achieving comprehension, and, if the election stands, the next two/four years will be grim for many who pulled the Bush lever.
The rich will gloat and get richer, but many who were naive and unquestioning will have more difficulties as a result of their choice.
The process of developing critical thinking is slow and frequently pai-ful. We are evolving human beings, and anyone who studies nature, knows that evolution is a slow and bumpy process.

The key is to remain active! The world is run by those who show up.
For a very long time the wealthy have made the rules and created a structure where the masses are simply their drones. One hundred years of reform have shown that we are better than that, but the selfish and powerful are making one last stand. So far they’ve succeeded, but it’s been done solely through lies, deception, creating meaningless fear and appealing to those who yearn for simple answers to complex issues.
They can’t win honestly.
So we'll keep shining the light of truth on the issues and, eventually, things will shift. It has happened before, and it most assuredly will happen again.

Recent Events

October 16 - Eleven MVPP members were among those who gathered to meet Stuart Leiderman at the home of Jane and Jack Cadarette. Leiderman is an expert regarding the Mesopotamian Marshes of Southern Iraq and is finishing up a doctoral program at the University of New Hampshire on Environmental Refugees and Ecological Restoration. He spoke of the global, environmental and humanitarian catastrophe that Saddam Hussein created following the first Gulf War. He also explained the behind-the-scenes work for the restoration of the marshes that organizations, scientists and individuals are poised to begin, with the help of the Ma'dans, when it is safe to do so. Ma’dans are the Marsh Arabs for whom the marshes were home. This indigenous people’s presence on the marshes can be traced back 5,000 years. Some of the half million of them now in exile are languishing in refugee camps in Iran or scattered on land in Iraq and elsewhere. Later, Leiderman was persuaded to play his guitar and sing a few of his original songs including “The General Election Blues.” The informative and enjoyable gathering concluded with a potluck supper. October 19 - MVPP sponsored ECONOMIC JUSTICE? WAR AND THE ECONOMY, a forum with Mike Prokosch. at Memorial Hall Library, Andover, Mass. Prokosch spent the last five years coordinating the global economy program at United for a Fair Economy, which is a national, independent, nonpartisan, non-profit organization. His talked was interspersed with group activities that made his points clear and easily understood. He urged the audience to work with others for economic justice.

October 26 - MVVP members Mary and Jim Todd met with students of Merrimack College’s Religion 101 class at the request of Professor Susan Scholtz. They were invited to make a connection between their United Methodist faith heritage and their social action against injustices. They shared a letter from United Methodist Bishop Grove that laid the foundation for people of faith to take direct action and heal the environment. The bishop also suggested that President Bush should be judged by his United Methodist denomination for acting against the "official" positions of his own denomination in regards to, among other things, engaging in war and harming the environment. This was the Todds’ second visit to this Professor’s class. They previously showed a video on the use of depleted uranium weapons.

November 2 - Brenda McCarthy invited MVPP members to join her at her home to await the election results. Attendees were grateful for the warm and friendly place, the camaraderie and the great food, all nourishment for the work ahead.

November 3 - Thirteen people and a dog came together for an evening vigil in Andover. A truly therapeutic moment after a late night and anxious day waiting for the election results. We held our flags, sang together and spoke of the future. Mary Kate and Don read their poems. Becci and Thea spoke of working at the polls. There were honks and waves from passing cars. We were together, fully committed to the work of peace and justice before us.

Of Interest

Tuesday was a dark day

Tuesday (Nov.2) was a dark day for peace and the environment. Our efforts to create a cleaner, safer world have been dealt a body blow. But today is a new day. And a new day brings new hope. We won't give up. We will continue to fight.

We will fight to end the occupation of Iraq and bring the troops home.

We will fight to stop new nuclear weapons.

We will fight to protect the air we breathe and water we drink.

We will fight for a better world for our children.

New Peace and Justice group

Jim and Mary Todd are starting a Peace and Justice group at First United Methodist Church in North Andover. The group will start with a six-week study of peace and justice issues, held from 6-7:30 on Sunday evenings starting November 14. The group will study the church's stand on war and peace and nuclear weapons and will discuss peace and social justice issues (such as poverty, human rights abuses, hunger, racism, the proliferation of nuclear and conventional weapons, sweatshop economics, the environment) and/or other issues that are important to people who come to the group. The booklet "In Defense of Creation" will be provided. Open to members of the church and community who wish to find ways to work for peace and justice.

How to Persist: Acting Together

"Acting together is essential if we’re going to keep on…Nelson Mandela and his fellow prisoners passing news from cell to cell on toilet paper…John Lewis's image of children holding hands in a storm…the mothers of the Plaza de Mayo communing in silent witness. There’s no more key lesson if we’re going to learn to persist: Isolation, whether physical or psychological, starves the human spirit; connection feeds and heals it. In her book Small Wonder, Barbara Kingsolver draws on this sense of connection to resist those who say it’s ridiculous to imagine that the world could be made better than it is. When I come down to this feeling that I am an army of one standing out on the broad plain waving my little flag of hope, I call up a friend or two and offer to make dinner for us. We remind ourselves that we aren’t standing apart from the crowd, we are a crowd. We’re a prairie fire, a church choir, a major note in the American chord…We’re the theater of the street, the accurate joy of children’s hearts, the literature of tomorrow’s wisdom arrived today, just in time. I’m with Emma Goldman: Our revolution will have dancing—and excellent food. In the long run, the choice of life over death is too good to resist."

Poems

“A Time for Peace”
by Catherine de Vinck

We can still make it gather the threads, the pieces each of different size and shade to match and sew into a pattern:
Rose of Sharon wedding ring circles and crowns.

We can still listen:
children at play; their voices mingling in the present tense of a time that can be extended.

Peace, we say looking through our pockets to find the golden word the coin to buy that ease that place sheltered from bullets and bombs.

But what we seek lies elsewhere beyond the course of lethargic blood beyond the narrow dream of resting safe and warm.

If we adjust our lenses
we see far in the distance figures of marching people homeless, hungry, going nowhere.

Why not call them to our mornings of milk and bread?
The coming night will be darker than the heart of stones unless we strike the match light the guiding candle say yes, there is room after all at the inn.

"NOVEMBER 11, 1918"

Brian’s friend, Marjie, sent this on Veteran’s/Armistice Day and I offered it. She wrote: My mother (1910-2003) wrote this during the Vietnam war-

When I was eight
And walking home from school one day
Town whistles of a sudden blared
And bells rang out
Until the world was deaf
With celebrating sounds.

"There’ll never be another war," they cried...
when I was eight.

From Granny D

A note of encouragement from Doris “Granny D” Haddock, who ran (and walked) for the N.H. Senate. She won 34% of the vote without accepting any special interest funds, and brought attention to many critical issues.

Dear Friends,

The presidential election has hit many of us like a death in the family. We are wandering around today in a daze.

Well, we know how to deal with a death in the family. We cook food and come together to talk out our feelings and memories. Then we are able to move on and keep at this beautiful thing called life. So let’s gather tomorrow night. Maybe you have a regularly scheduled meet up that you can turn into a potluck. Or maybe you can send a note out to your email list and come up with a place and time over the weekend. But let’s do this. Suffering alone, or latching onto strangers on the street won’t do.

Whether the gathering is in Florida or Minnesota, Maine or California, I think we all have much to talk about. Let’s not be afraid to think big, like a new political party or at least new ways of organizing. Remember, we do what we do not only for the future outcome (which didn’t come out last night!), but also because we find joy in the battle—a poor choice of words, I admit, for standing up for love in the world. They can’t take that one away from us, and they just gave us an invitation of historic proportions.

Sincerely,
Doris

"Peace Vision Project" Launched for Young Iraqi Teacher Blinded in War

Merrimack Valley People for Peace took a big and generous step October 26 when it approved $1000 to help start a fund for a young Iraqi woman teacher who was attacked and blinded while working for the Coalition Provisional Authority earlier this year.

According to an urgent call for help sent to MVPP member Jane Cadarette, North Andover, attackers shot Ms. Ahlam abd Al-Husayn Nijim in the head and neck, causing extensive skull fractures, the loss of her right eye and severe damage to her left. She suffered in Iraq for three months before somehow reaching the Palestine Hospital in Amman, Jordan.

There, a neurosurgeon and ophthalmologist found "a severed right optic nerve and a severely damaged left globe." Their report expressed little hope that she could recover even partial vision. [The neurosurgeon, Dr.Nasri Khoury, is also the hospital's director and he has become known for his research and treatment of Palestinian gunshot victims. He believes they are suffering unusually severe wounds from what may be new and more lethal kinds of fragmenting ammunition used by Israeli soldiers against the Intifada. It is not known whether forces in Iraq are also using this ammunition.]

Ahlam’s blindness came to the attention of an officer at the United States Embassy in Amman who has been personally trying to help Iraqi families. He determined that Ahlam might recover some vision if she were brought to an appropriate clinic or hospital in the U.S. He has offered to arrange a visa for her if others could find the specialists and money for her treatment and rehabilitation. His proposition was relayed to a supporter of Voices in the Wilderness who forwarded to Photos ‘speak volumes,’ says torture victim Cadarette. In turn, she sent it to Stuart Leiderman, Center Barnstead, New Hampshire because they've been working together on a variety of projects concerning the future of Iraq, especially the fate of the ecology and refugees of the marshlands of southern Iraq. Leiderman is an environmental and public health educator and project specialist who maintains a large network of students, teachers, organizations and specialists for emergency response.

From a friend in Amman, Leiderman quickly learned that Ahlam is "a beautiful young woman" and a teacher, whose brother was trying to care for her while she attempted to recover from the past difficult months. He learned that two charitable organizations and two individuals had paid for her initial treatment, "therefore, it seems that she is someone important." But she seemed to be very lonely and "depression is really getting the best of her." Now that they have a direct phone number, Leiderman and Cadarette will soon arrange an international call to Ahlam to cheer her up and offer the good news of help from MVPP.

To replace her lost eye, Ahlam's doctors fitted her with a glass one. Leiderman and Cadarette do not know, however, what vision, if any, remains in her other damaged eye. Detailed answers to that and other questions about Ahlam's health and ability to travel will determine their exact plan of action. Already, they have contacted and compiled a list of willing eye surgeons and other specialists. The next step is to estimate the cost for treatment and follow-up over the next two years, even including the purchase and training of a guide dog if necessary. Their immediate goal is $5,000 by the holiday season, and $10,000 by mid-winter.

Ahlam's plight is not an exception; many other severely-wounded Iraqi civilians are continually fleeing to Jordan for medical treatment. Leiderman's friend in Amman wrote, "There are lots of cases like Ahlam's... I have been visiting other Iraqis in other hospitals... I hear very sad stories from them and I know they need all kinds of support possible. So if you think you can arrange some fund raising, I can film these people and prepare some good material and show it for those who like to help in the States or other countries. I have never done such a thing so I don't know what are the possibilities, but I know they need our help!" Further, doctors report that "there are lots of people suffering in Iraq who are in urgent need of medical treatment but they can't cross the borders."

Cadarette will administer MVPP's start-up contribution and additional funds under a special account named Peace Vision Project. She says, "I expect that this project will not only be help for Ahlam. It will raise awareness of the true cost of war for thousands of severely-wounded, innocent civilians of Iraq whose own hospitals lack the equipment and medicines to treat them." All contributions will be gratefully received.

Photos ‘speak volumes,’ says torture victim

-Linda Cooper and James Hodge

“If you live through this, no one will believe you. No one will listen. No one will care.”

For years, the torturer’s words haunted Sr. Dianna Ortiz, an Ursuline missionary in Guatemala when she was kidnapped in 1989, blindfolded, burned with cigarettes and repeatedly raped. U.S. government officials tried to discredit her. Others refused to believe that her torture came at the hands of Guatemalan security forces operating under the direction of an American.

Until the release of pictures showing U.S. military personnel torturing Iraqis at Abu Ghraib prison, Ortiz told NCR many Americans were skeptical about their government’s being involved in torture. “But photographs speak volumes, they’re really worth a thousand words.”

When she first saw the photographs of hooded Iraqis being sexually humiliated, of vicious dogs within inches of the faces of the detainees, Ortiz started reliving her own torture. “When all these photographs came out,” said Ortiz, now the head of Torture Abolition and Survivors Support Coalition International, “I can’t tell you how many survivors, myself included, traveled back in time.”

“It’s sad, but what we see in Iraq is not an aberration,” said Maryknoll Fr. Roy Bourgeois, founder of a movement seeking to close the U.S. Army’s School of the Americas, which has not only graduated hundreds of human rights abusers, but also used manuals advocating torture and assassination. “Hopefully, this is a teachable moment, when more Americans will be open to learning about what their government has been doing for years in their name with their tax dollars.”

Like Ortiz, Bourgeois was once abducted by Latin American security forces trained and backed by the United States. The priest was a missionary in Bolivia in the 1970s during the dictatorship of Gen. Hugo Banzer, who had overthrown the government and operated torture cells around the country.

Bourgeois had earned the ire of the regime for organizing base Christian communities and visiting political prisoners at the request of the local bishop. Banzer’s secret police abducted him one Sunday after-noon and took him blindfolded to a cemetery. When he refused to provide the names of activists working for reforms, he was beaten and struck in the stomach with a rifle butt. One of the interrogators put a revolver to his head and kept shouting, “I hate priests.” Bourgeois survived only because Maryknoll superiors were able to get the bishop to intercede.

Both Ortiz and Bourgeois were later shocked to learn that School of the Americas, now known as the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, had links to Latin American generals related to their abductions. The U.S. Army school had invited Guatemalan Gen. Hector Gramajo to speak at its 1991 graduation ceremony six months after Ortiz and 11 Guatemalans sued him under the Torture Victim Protection Act. Banzer was elected to the school’s hall of fame.

Bourgeois had an awakening in 1993 when the U.N. Truth Commission on El Salvador released its report naming the officers responsible for the assassinations of Archbishop Oscar Romero, four U.S. churchwomen, and the six Jesuit priests. School of the Americas graduates lay behind each of those killings, in addition to the massacre in El Mozote, El Salvador, where hundreds of innocent peasants were slaughtered.

Not only has the U.S. Army trained brutal foreign militaries, Bourgeois said, but the CIA has helped set up foreign intelligence agencies like Chiles’s DINA, which was well-known for its use of torture during the Pinochet dictatorship and was headed by School of the Americas graduate Manuel Contreras.

What’s more, he said, the U.S. government presented the prestigious Legion of Merit Award to the two Salvadoran generals, Jose Guillermo Garcia and Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova, cited by the U.N. Truth Commission for their roles in the rapes and murders of the four U.S. churchwomen and later found responsible in a U.S. court for the torture of three Salvadorans, including Dr. Juan Romagoza Arce, who was stabbed, given electric shock, strung up by ropes and burned with cigarettes.

For Ortiz, the smell of cigarettes can trigger memories of being burned more than 111 times with cigarettes. She still sleeps with the light on.
“No one ever fully recovers from torture,” Ortiz said. “It just doesn’t go away.” That is the message she wants to get out at a time so many are arguing for its use in the so-called war on terror.

Bremen Peace Award 2005

Crossing Boundaries / Breaking Vicious Circles * Bremen Peace Award 2005 of the Threshold Foundation for exemplary commitments for justice, peace and integrity of creation.

Again persons, initiatives or projects will be honored for a special contribution in one or several of the following areas: Reconciliation, human rights, countering racism, social justice, integrity of the creation, cross-cultural or cross-religious communication. Award winners will be selected in the three categories below. Beside the money award of 5000 Euro each for one of the proposed persons/initiatives the Threshold plans again a publication of a limited number of particularly convincing projects taken from the overall amount of nominations in an English and German brochure to draw the attention of a worldwide audience towards such peace work.

Invitation for proposals in category A: Award for the Unknown Peace Worker. This category targets at little known, small initiatives/projects, but also at committed single persons working in the fields above with special emphasis for unconventional initiatives at the grassroots level of peace work.

Invitation for proposals in Category B: Award for Exemplary Initiatives. In this category we seek for initiatives or organizations with exemplary commitment for the aims of the Threshold Peace Award described above.

Invitations for Proposals in Category C: Award for public contributions for justice, peace and integrity of creation. In this category an award will be given to persons in the public, who have shown sustainable and courageous commitment for peace and justice, like journalists or academics but also politicians or artists. For more information: www.dieschwelle.de/content/englisch/peace_award.html.

Letter to the Daily News of Newburyport, Oct. 28, from new MVPP member Diana Philip

According to the New York Times, recent estimates by British Petroleum’s Energy Information Administration predict that non-OPEC oil-producing nations at current rates of production will run out of oil reserves in less than 25 years. Among OPEC nations, at current rates of production, the length of time reserves will last range from 150 years (Iraq) to possibly 80 years (Saudi Arabia) to approximately 12 to 15 years in Indonesia. Every increasing demand and other factors will alter these estimates, and production rates will increase for some suppliers as others run out. Between 1997 and 2003, American oil companies purchased over three billion barrels of Iraqi crude oil during the United Nations Oil for Food program. It is easy to understand the oil industry’s intense interest in the Middle East.

Since just about all the stated reasons for attacking Iraq have proven to be false, it seems safe to assume that the one major overriding reason for the invasion was to acquire oil. The Bush administration does not want to liberate Iraq; it wants to own it. Rather than focusing on developing alternative forms of sustainable energy that will not endanger the ecosystem that we depend upon to survive, this administration chooses to wage wars of conquest to dominate the dwindling oil supply, wasting American and Iraqi lives for the relatively short-term, short-sighted gains of Texas oil companies. In doing so the president has inflamed an entire region, caused tens of thousands of deaths and pushed untold numbers into becoming recruits for terrorist groups.

In war, hideous atrocities are carried out against the defenseless and the innocent as much as against the perceived enemy. Killing and brutality are the order of the day and there is no limit to the horrors engendered by war. To glorify war is vile. War is something to be undertaken only as a last resort and only in self-defense, not as a means to enrich powerful interests. In today’s world, the owners of those interests can shift their accounts and holdings from place to place without real allegiance to any country. They need only a base of operations. We are told tax breaks allow corporations to invest more and therefore create jobs, but are not told if these jobs will be here or somewhere overseas. The powerful may not need an America that persists in the genuine struggle for freedom and justice that is our heritage, but I do and I fervently hope we can be set back on that course.

D. Philip, Newburyport

The event is sponsored by the First Church in Ipswich and the House of Peace, also in Ipswich.

‘STONE SOUP” supper. Tues. Nov. 23, 6:30 PM. You are invited to MVPP’s annual ‘STONE SOUP” supper at the North Parish Church, (across from Old North Andover Common) to share a simple meal of bread and soup. We will be accepting donations of food for the meal and individual contributions for Oxfam America’s Fast for a World Harvest fund drive. After the meal MVPP will conduct a brief meeting, followed by the video Hijacking Catastrophe: 9/11, Fear & the Selling of American Empire, which examines how a radical fringe of the Republican Party used the trauma of the 9/11 terror attacks to advance a pre-existing agenda to radically transform American foreign policy while rolling back civil liberties and social programs at home.

Protest at Pease Fri. Nov. 26, 12:45 PM: President Bush is scheduled to appear at a Victory 2004 rally at Pease International Tradeport. The appearance will follow a stop in Manchester at 10:45 a.m., according to a notice sent out by the Bush/Cheney campaign (Foster's). Protest plans are in the works. For more information contact Carol Tashie at cztashie@yahoo.com.

Choral Music Sun. Nov. 28, at 4 PM A concert celebrating the original choral music of Carolyn Brown Senier of Lake Mattawa will be performed, the Sunday after Thanksgiving in Central Congregational Church, Orange, MA. Quabbin Valley Pro Musica and The Lake Mattawa Singers, numbering thirty-six vocalists, will present twelve of Brown Senier’s original works. Instrumental ensembles include Pioneer Valley Brass, The Lake Mattawa Chamber Ensemble, baroque trumpeter Fred Holmgren of Athol, and pianist Gretchen Saathoff of Amherst. Tickets at $12.00 or $10.00 for students or senior citizens are available at Bruce’s, Emily’s Needleworks, and Haley’s in Athol; at Lu’s Flowers and Gifts in Orange; at New Salem General Store; online at www.mattawasonycycle.com or by calling 978.249.9400

Founding Mothers: The Women Who Raised Our Country, Mon. Nov. 29, 6:30 PM, Old South Meeting House, 275 Washington Street, downtown Boston. While much has been written about the men who signed the Declaration of Independence, battled the British, and framed the Constitution, the wives, mothers, daughters they left behind have been little noticed in history. Cokie Roberts delivers an intimate and illuminating look at the patriotic and passionate women whose tireless pursuits on behalf of their families - and their countries - proved just as crucial to the forging of a new nation as the rebellion that established it. Contact Information: 617-373-5800.

The First Annual MGA Anti-Corporate Holiday Party at the Zeitgeist Gallery in Inman Square, Cambridge. Thurs. Dec. 2, 7 PM (show starts at 7:30PM). Featuring the first public performance of the rock musical “Jesus Christ Terrorist,” starring the Reagan Babies. Tickets are $20. For more information, contact info@massglobalaction.org or 617-338-9966

Discussion on Zionism Sun. Dec. 5, Sunday, 7-9 PM. Paul Saba will discuss and lead a discussion on Zionism—The historical tension between a single movement and a multitude of political ideologies and how that plays out today. Location: TBA

Attendees: Becci Backman, Lou Bernieri, Arthur Brien, Jane Cadarette, Peter Cameron, Bobbie Goldman, Barbara Haack, Fred Hyder, Sue Imhoff, Brenda McCarthy, Brian Quirk, Boryana Tacconi, and Jim and Mary Todd.

Treasurer’s Report: Peter reported a balance of $5,243.04 (without $160, brought in tonight).

Committees:

Membership: Becci reported:

-We have 73 paid members, not including at least 10 active members whose dues are outstanding.
-October 1 was the date on which the filing to legally change our name to Merrimack Valley People for Peace, Inc. became effective.
--Don Abbot sent information regarding the name change to the IRS last week.

Newsletters:

-Thank you note from Christen Mills, the Girl Scout in Chelmsford, whose event we attended in August.
-We have 73 paid members, not including at least 10 active members whose dues are outstanding.

Officers:

-Bobbie announced that we have two vacancies on the board after the resignations of Susan Manning and Lee Bluemel. Barbara Haack and Brenda McCarthy were elected the terms.

Newsletter:

-Becci is resigning as editor of our newsletter. She will still coordinate the newsletter and will help with the transition to a new editor. Lou offered to organize the newsletter if someone would be responsible for each section, but is unavailable next month. After a discussion, we had the following volunteers for the various sections:

Good News Boryana Taconni
Upcoming Events - Sue Imhoff
Recent History - Jim Todd Minutes - Don Abbott

Website Changes:

Salem vigils to Saturday at 12:30-1:30. Raytheon vigil is later, at 6:30-7:30 am, on Tuesdays.
- Catch up the Recent Events page.
Sue volunteered to help with the webpage in the future. Bobbie will send Brian updates of recent events for the past few months.

- To Post immediately: Vigils Monday night, before Tuesday’s election. Boston’s UJP encourages local organizations to hold events. (We signed on with the nationwide AFSC vigils after the meeting.) Bobbie shared plans for vigils, and various protests and proposed actions after the election if there is fraud, including Wednesday evening at 5. UJP will also have a debriefing session on Sunday, Nov. 7th at 3PM at Community Church in Copley Square.
Kerry will have a rally Tuesday night in Boston.
Becchi and Bobbie will email details to Brian to post.

Programs and Upcoming Events

Before the meeting, Brenda passed out invitations/directions to an election night party at her house.

- UJP Brunch:
Bobbie announced that the next brunch is scheduled for November 20, a Saturday morning, so people who attend church can go.

- Solidarity School, November 11-14 at YMCA Campground, Sandwich MA, Cape Cod. Peace, community, and labor groups will meet, to study and plan.
MVPP will pay for three people to attend that Saturday. Becchi and Boryana, and possibly Peter

- Stone Soup supper November 23 at 6:30m at North Parish Church, North Andover. We will show a video, “Hijacking Catastrophe”. Set up will begin at 5:30. Becchi moved that we donate $250 to Oxfam regardless of how much we collect that night. We voted to approve the donation increase.

- Sunday, November 14, Pat Scanlon will be performing at Boston’s Community Church with Veterans for Peace. A veteran from Iraq will speak.

- SOA, School of the Americas protest at Fort Benning GA, November 19 - 21. We voted to provide up to $200 for up to two people from here (Mary Kate often participates in the annual protest).

- A tour of Iraq Veterans Against the War is coming to the greater Boson area for 10 days in February to speak with various peace groups and schools.

- Eddie Kuroki, wants support and composers for his project to commission a musical commemoration for Hiroshima’s 60th anniversary, next August.

- November 21 concert: First Church, Ipswich. MVPP member, Sister Willie, is in the chorus (and they have a CD) (See Oct. Newsletter).

- Jim and Mary will talk with students in an Introduction to Religious Studies class at Merrimack College, on the relationship of their faith to peace and social justice.

- Jim invited us to a class at his church 11/14 -12/19, Peace and Justice group that he has volunteered to lead at his church. “In Defense of Creation” will be used as a text.

Donation Decisions:

Israel/Palestine: MVPP voted to endorse the US Campaign to End the Israeli Occupation, and to donate $100 (annual dues) to that organization. This is a coalition including many US Arab and Jewish peace organizations. Among the members are Pax Christi and UJP of Massachusetts.

- November 29th is a Day of Solidarity; we are encouraged to write to Congress and hold an informational protest illuminating the injustices being perpetrated with the use of US funds.

- Becchi will send links to Brian to put on our website.

Injured Iraqi Woman

Jane Cadarette made a five minute audio-tape presentation about a 25 year old Iraqi woman who had been shot twice in the head because of her work with the Coalition Provisional Authority in Iraq. Jane agreed to help when asked by Alan Pogue, Texas photographer and George Capaccio of Voices in the Wilderness. She asked MVPP for $1,000 seed money. [ed. See article, titled on page__.] A discussion followed and members expressed their desire to help. Jim Todd said that he would lead local fundraising to replace the money, and members voted to give Jane the thousand dollars to use at her discretion.

Special Meeting

There will be a special meeting to discuss donations, on December 7, 7:30 to 9, at the First United Methodist Church.

Next Meeting:
The next monthly meeting will be held, with the Stone Soup Supper, on November 23, at 6:30 pm at the North Parish Church.
Respectfully Submitted
